meet the Hemostasis experts IV

welcome

Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of the Executive Board of the M.Sc. Course “Thrombosis-Haemorrhage-Transfusion Medicine” of the Medical School of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens, we take the pleasure in inviting you to the fourth “Meet the Haemostasis Experts” conference that the audience will attend as a webinar. This year the seminar will focus on the newest development in the fight against Covid-19.

All evidence emerging daily show that SARS-CoV-2 infection is much more than just a respiratory disease but can result in coagulopathy and increased risk of thrombosis in critically ill patients. We feel fortunate that our outstanding lecturers will share with us their recent experience with covid patients and try to chart the uncharted waters of the coagulopathy in the disease.

We look forward to welcoming you and hope that physical distancing will not be an obstacle to our common goal that is to clarify ambiguous approaches that arise in daily practice.

Anthi Travlou

Emeritus Professor of Hemostasis

Marianna Politou

*Associate Professor of Laboratory
Hematology - Immunohematology*

After completing this educational webinar attendants should be able to:

- Have access to data collected regarding the impact of SARS-CoV-2 infection on the coagulation system
- Understand the pathophysiology of thrombosis in SARS-CoV-2 infection
- Implement the appropriate anticoagulation approach to prevent thrombosis in SARS-CoV-2 patients
- Evaluate the prognostic and diagnostic value of the laboratory findings on hemostasis testing in SARS-CoV-2 patients
